A Director's Note

"Careful the tale you tell.
That is the spell."

If you listen closely, you can hear tales being told across America: in the classrooms, in the courts, in the streets, in the sitcoms, in the selling of goods, and in the houses of worship and government. You hear tales of how you can make it, tales of what men just do and how women just are, and tales of why so many people of color are so poor and why so many poor people can't help themselves. You know the story of why gay women and men are aberrations of nature and why true human nature is competitive, thus justifying the economic order. While these tales give a framework to a complex world, they can also lull us into a spellbound state of complacency and ignorance.

"Sometimes the spell may last
Past what you can see
And turn against you . . ."

Tonight, you will follow several familiar characters, among them Cinderella, Jack, and Little Red Ridinghood, as they go into the woods to fulfill their wishes. The spells which guide them are the tales they have been told: your partner should be physically perfect, success in life is money, you will be safe if you stay naive. When inherent contradictions cause their wishes to backfire, they must return to the woods, the disorienting woods where all things are possibilities, and make new choices of what to believe and how to act.

We place these individual quests in the larger context of the 60's majority culture. This was a time in U.S. history when much of the mainstream was dragged into the woods. The spells that held many people were broken by the civil rights and anti-war movements, Black Power, and the subsequent birth of the women's and gay rights movements. It was a time when a giantess of historically oppressed peoples came calling for redress.

Today, we are potentially on the brink of another journey into the woods. The rumblings of discontent from urban centers, university campuses, and Third World nations are the approaching footsteps of those seeking compensation for lost kin. We can either choose to hang on to tales that don't work, or we can break the spell, embracing a world of cooperation, justice, and peace.

About the Artists

Stephen Sondheim is highly regarded as one of the finest composer/lyricists in musical theatre. His Broadway successes include West Side Story, Gypsy, A Funny Thing Happened on the Way to the Forum, Sweeney Todd, and Sunday in the Park with George. Critics hailed his Company as one of the most innovative musicals of its time. His other musicals include A Little Night Music, Follies, Pacific Overtures, and Merrily We Roll Along. Sondheim is the only composer/lyricist in Broadway history to win the Tony Award in three consecutive years. Today, he holds five Tonys, as well as the Pulitzer Prize for Drama (Sunday in the Park with George). Sondheim recently won an Oscar for his song "Sooner or Later" from the film Dick Tracy.

James Lapine, a contemporary American director and playwright, has collaborated with Stephen Sondheim for the second time to create the Broadway success Into the Woods. Previously, Lapine and Sondheim created the critically acclaimed Sunday in the Park with George (1983), which won a New York Drama Critics Circle Award for Best Musical, Tony Award nominations for Best Director and Best Book, and a Pulitzer Prize for Drama. Into the Woods earned Lapine a Tony Award for Best Book in 1987. He has received numerous other awards for his writing and directing, including an Obie Award for Photograph (1977), a Drama Desk Award, a George Oppenheimer Playwrighting Award, and a Guggenheim Fellowship.
